

Job description for a Fast2fibre field engineer

Fast2fibre is an international company that has developed a suite of technology for the extraction of the copper core of a cable for telecommunication or power companies. The work will be away from home base of Kleinfrauenhaid, Austria and be physically demanding.

Character & job requirements

- General engineering background
- A logical thinker with a problem-solving mindset
- Happy to work away from home base for prolonged periods
- Some experience of telecommunication cables and network would be an advantage
- Be prepared to work flexible hours and a pattern to fit the preparation, deployment and recovery
- Have a valid driving license
- Having a plant license would be an advantage
- Computer literate
- Basic understanding of the principles of power, hydraulics and pneumatics
- Ability to work in varying field environments
- Ability to work with and as a team.
- Supporting delivery to the client/ civil contract partners by providing technical advice and consultation during the projects
- To work with the F2F partners in the specification and delivery of the equipment and specialist components of the process and project
- Good understanding and command of the English language

Terms:

Work location	Kleinfrauenhaid Working weekends in preparation Flexibility in working hours whilst deployed
Homebase	As required but Kleinfrauenhaid, Austria for pre & post deployment plus customer site location
Term	Full time, stepped salary depending on length of service and deployed pay scale and a retained pay scale based upon weeks of activity
Salary	€1800 per month depending on experience during the probationary period of six months then €2100. Further increases will be inline with the company's business performance and personal performance